BLOOMER GIRLS TO MEET OGDEN

To last evening Manager Glimlin had been unable to secure a definite date for the game in this city next Sunday and the local fans may be deprived of their weekly portion of the national pastime. Manager "Dad" is trying to locate Manager Black with a view to bringing the Ogdens to the Fair grounds next Sabbath but the colored boys' official is hard to find at times and the local magazine is therefore temporarily up in the air as regards a game for Sunday.

It had been planned to pull off a unique game in the form of Ogdens City teams but this was postponed until Sunday, Sept. 3. In this game Ogdens with nine men in the field will attempt to trim the other two teams combined and this does not mean a picked nine from the eighteen men but seventeen men in the field at once. With two men playing every position with the exception of that of pitcher it does not require a computing scale to calculate just how hard it will be for the Ogdens batsmen to pole out a safe swat. Games of this sort never fail to produce an unlimited amount of fun and a team of such dimensions ought to give Glimlin's men a drubbing.

A series which is attracting considerable attention comes on Saturday and Sunday, August 26 and 27, when Glimlin's men will meet the Boston Bloomer Girls at the Fair grounds. The Boston team has been playing in different parts of the state for the past two weeks or more and their showing to date has been a very creditable one. The manager appreciates the strength of the Ogdens team but is certain that his club can capture at least one game. There are a number of men on the team and the club has four left-handed hitters, three of whom were secured from the defunct Missouri league. There is also among the women members of the team a southpaw twirler and a woman holds down the first sack.

POLICE DRAGNET TO CLEAN UP CITY

An order issuing from the head of the police department and demanding a general cleanup of the city, resulted last evening in the arrest of a score of drunks and vagabonds. The dragnet of plain clothes men swooped down on the Twenty-fifth street district and within the short space of a few hours had no difficulty in rounding up twenty undesirable, who now occupy cells at the city jail.

The order to rid the city of idlers and bums came as the result of the recent robberies, and the raid last evening is calculated to start a large number of unemployed men out of the city. Those who conducted the crusade last evening were Chief of Detectives James Pender, Captain of Police C. C. Brown, Detectives George Wardlaw and Robert Burke and Merchant Police Dan Sullivan.

The officers made three visits to the Twenty-fifth street section, searching the alleys and rear of saloons. Each visit brought forth a wagonload of men whose condition brought them within the pale of the law as offenders. All will be given a hearing before Judge Murphy this morning and probably be given terms on the rock pile.

"Well," the librarian replied in a slow drawl, "I find the surest way is to send him a postal card."—Success Magazine.

RUSH WORK ON CONSOLIDATION

That the telephone systems of Ogden are to be consolidated into one in the immediate future is now assured, the work of preparing for the consolidation being now in progress. Manager Madison of the Bell company says he is using every man who can possibly be used, and that as soon as all the material can be placed in the Bell building on Washington avenue, the change will be made and the independent telephone will cease to exist.

In answer to the question as to what kind of service will be given when the consolidation is perfected and there is but one phone in the field, Mr. Madison stated that it would be the best that could be given and that no means would be spared to give the service required by the business interests and the residence population.

A short time ago an unknown party addressed a communication to the city council regarding the attitude of the telephone people toward Ogden, and especially regarding an alleged discrimination in favor of Salt Lake and against Ogden. The communication was referred to the law committee and the committee handed it to the manager of the Bell Telephone company to dispose of as he saw fit. Mr. Madison addressed an answer to the communication. The two communications follow:

Letter of Criticism.
"To the Honorable City Council of Ogden City:—It is an admitted fact that the same money interests that control the Bell Telephone company control the independent system in Ogden, and in view of this fact and the fact that every subscriber that has both phones is paying double for what could be had if there was but one system, there is a lot of dissatisfaction being expressed by the conservative business people here. The council does not relieve them of this burden. As this matter is looked into, it is noticed that this Bell Telephone company is playing unfair with Ogden in the matter of their directory. They are supplying us with a directory that is made for Salt Lake City, in which it may be noticed that the towns tributary to Ogden, such as Plain City, Brigham City, Tremonton, Garland, Malad, Logan and others are left out, while the towns of Bingham Canyon, Bountiful, Coalville, Eureka, Farmington, Garfield, Heber City, Mammoth, Mercur, Midvale, Murray Park City and other towns that are naturally tributary to Salt Lake City are put in. "Is it not true that these people agreed to furnish a directory for Ogden? It is remembered that the directory used to have Ogden in the front and the towns surrounding Ogden following, then came Salt Lake and the towns surrounding Salt Lake. This was a sensible arrangement. It is time we opposed this 'halfing' of Ogden, and while this does not look to be an important matter, the business people who have to use outside phones find it a great advantage, and respectfully ask the council to secure them the best consideration possible at the hands of the telephone trust."

Answer of Telephone Manager.

"Ogden, Utah, August 12, 1911.
"Mr. H. J. Peery, Chairman Law Committee, City.
"Dear Sir:—I am in receipt of your letter attaching communication bearing no signature, relative to Salt Lake City directory. The Ogden directory is a separate arrangement. It is time we opposed this 'halfing' of Ogden, and while this does not look to be an important matter, the business people who have to use outside phones find it a great advantage, and respectfully ask the council to secure them the best consideration possible at the hands of the telephone trust."

"The communication also advises that the towns tributary to Ogden should be published in the Ogden directory. You will note that Plain City, North Ogden, Huntsville, Morgan and Evanston are listed in the Ogden book, and if any subscriber is desirous of locating a party in any city throughout the entire system for telephoning, this information can be had free of charge and will be furnished at the time and expense of the operating department.

"The assertion that the company shows partiality to Salt Lake is unfair and unjust, as our investment in Ogden is just as great comparatively as in Salt Lake and our company is just as interested in the advancement of Ogden City as they are in any city throughout the entire territory.
(Signed) W. F. MADSON,
"District Manager."

MAN MAY FACE SERIOUS CHARGE

What is believed by the police to be the culmination of a series of offenses which would seem to have as an object the criminal assault upon young girls, was brought about last evening in the arrest of Wm. Little in the vicinity of Grant avenue and Twenty-second street.

Several complaints have been received from different parts of the city during the past few days of a man who pursued and frightened young girls on the streets. About seven o'clock last evening a call was received from the vicinity of the Grant school on Grant avenue.

The patrol wagon with Detective George Wardlaw in charge was sent to the locality. The man who afterwards gave his name as Little saw the wagon approaching and attempted to make his escape by running through an alley but in doing so he came in contact with the detectives, who had anticipated such a move.

He was placed under arrest and taken to police headquarters, where he talked in a manner which gave the police reason to believe that he is not entirely sane. The man was locked up but no charge was placed against him last evening, the officers desiring to make a further investigation of the case. Little claims that he is 35 years of age and came to this city from Salt Lake a few days ago.

HOME INDUSTRY CLUB'S OUTING

The first annual outing of the Home Industry Association of Ogden was held at The Hermitage grove in the canyon yesterday afternoon and evening. The affair was planned and successfully carried out by the ladies of that organization, their husbands being the somewhat surprised guests, they having not been requested to assist in the preparations.

There were about 75 members of the association present, including all of its officers. The ladies spent the afternoon in a social manner and when the gentlemen arrived about 7 o'clock they found a delicious repast awaiting them in the big pavilion, where long tables had been loaded with Utah-made eatables.

The banquet was not followed by a formal program of toasts but several of those present made short addresses. Among these were J. S. Carver, president of the Utah Pure Food Commission. Mr. Carver told of the great results which had been accomplished by the members of the Home Industry association in the matter of boosting Utah products and also lauded the ladies for their enterprise in arranging such a delightful outing.

The Home Industry association of this city, which sprung into existence last winter when the Home products exhibition was held, has steadily increased in membership until the food products used in more than a hundred Ogden homes are purchased by members of this organization which has as its sole aim and ambition the boosting of Utah's industries. Manufacturers and retailers claim that the influence of the association is noticeable in the increase in sale of Utah products and another annual food exhibit this winter will doubtless be the means of more than doubling the present membership of the Ogden association.

POLICE FIND NO SECRET GAMBLE

An eight-hour search for gamblers instituted by the police last night ended without an arrest, although a number of places rumored to be secret gambling resorts were entered or watched to ascertain if any games were in progress.

Chief of Police Browning stated this morning that in his opinion there is no gambling in operation in Ogden at the present time, despite rumors to the contrary. The chief also defended the action of the city authorities in making charges of misdemeanor against the men recently arrested for gambling instead of charging them with felony.

"There are always some people ready to criticize the action of the police without taking the trouble to investigate the cause of such action," said the chief. "It is certain that the persons who have criticized the officers for not filing a felony charge against the men arrested on Grant avenue have never read the new state gambling laws."

"The new law is written in two sections and the second section offsets the first one. The law in its entirety provided that only the proprietor of the gambling house, the one actually running the illegal game for profit, can be convicted of felony. The second section of the law plainly states that persons found playing the games are guilty of a misdemeanor and that the person owning the property where the games are played, provided he knows that his place is being used for gambling, is guilty of a misdemeanor. Under the new law it would be practically impossible to secure a conviction under a felony charge."

"The men we arrested for gambling were playing poker. Each of them had a pile of chips in front of him. There was absolutely no way of telling which of the men was operating the game or if there was one of the men operating it in the sense of the new law. Had four of the men sworn that the fifth was conducting the game for profit, the fifth might have been convicted but there was no possibility of any four of the men swearing against a fifth."

BIG FOLKS LIKE COPPER OUTLOOK

Two very prominent copper authorities are quoted in the east on the situation, and both are optimistic. These are William A. Payne and John D. Ryan. Mr. Payne is quoted as follows:

"The copper trade situation has improved. Not that we can expect any rapid rise in the price of the metal in the immediate future, but the business is now on a more stable basis than it has been at any time for the past three years."

"I am satisfied that the outlook of the metal has now overtaken the production. During all this period of low-priced metal the export has been exceptionally good, but the domestic consumption has been unfortunately small. Now, however, there is a decided improvement in domestic demands for copper, with the additional fact that our foreign requirements are as large if not larger than before. The result is that prices are bound to do better."

"To be sure we have a good surplus on hand, but that will be taken care of without trouble and the fact is that we are not going to have unusual influx of copper from any of the new properties. The Ray and the Chino will of course add to the American production considerably, but not enough to upset the market and outside of these I see no other properties that are likely to produce enough copper to make any material effect on the metal prices in the very near future."

"The metal brokers across the water have been playing a very good business game for the past few years. They have always managed to keep the price down and they have made enormous purchases at unusually low figures. It seems to me, however, that they have now reached the end of their rope and they will find it difficult to secure any more such remarkable bargains as they have managed to obtain in recent months. I believe that copper has turned the corner and I believe, too, that general business conditions throughout the nation are better than they have been for two years and are likely to continue to improve, with reasonable assurances of good crops this season."

John D. Ryan says:

"I am quite satisfied that we are going to see better times ahead for the metal situation. The demand is increasing rapidly and the ordinary general business conditions we should see better prices for copper in the near future."

"There have been no new deposits of copper opened up for production since 1907. It is true that some of the newer properties that were discovered previous to that date are now getting ready for production, but outside of one of two of these we are sure that there will be no material addition to the copper output in this country beyond what is now in sight for at least five years to come. The low price at which we have been producing for the past few years has deterred exploration to a very considerable extent."

"While the foreign demand for the metal has been our salvation during the past few years we are now entering upon a period of unusual electrical development that will require a great deal of copper. The settlement of the subway troubles in New York city is just one instance. That means a demand for a large amount of copper for electrification and all over the country the electric development has been unusual and is going to have an important effect on the metal situation in the next few years."

ROMAN RUINS AS RELICS IN BRITAIN.

Here the walls of "Indurum flint, and brick in ruddy tiers
With immemorial heben frosted o'er."
Toll no tale of Roman life in this bleak East Anglian outpost of the great empire. Only from the situation of the fortress can it be deduced that it was built to ward off the attacks of those Saxon pirates whose ships often hovered about the mouth of the estuary, for history has nothing to relate concerning it, save the name of the cavalry regiment by which it was garrisoned at the end of the fourth century, when the Romans concentrated along Hadrian's wall and the Saxon shore. In a field near by fragments of urns that held the ashes of the cremated dead are sometimes turned up by the plow, and farm laborers who work around the castle generally have Roman coins to sell in exchange for strangers who visit it; but although antiquaries have gone so far as to say that some of those very laborers are descended from Roman colonists and soldiery, the significance of the massive fortress is unknown to nine out of ten of the people who have dwelt beside it all their lives. They are obsessed with the idea that Cromwell—whose forceful personality left a strong impression on folk-memory—was responsible for its construction, and that it had some close connection with his "doings against" the church.

Today an aged laborer who is eating his dinner in the shade of a fallen tower strives to enlighten me concerning a coin of the Lower Empire getting ready for production, but outside of one of two of these we are sure that there will be no material addition to the copper output in this country beyond what is now in sight for at least five years to come. The low price at which we have been producing for the past few years has deterred exploration to a very considerable extent.

"While the foreign demand for the metal has been our salvation during the past few years we are now entering upon a period of unusual electrical development that will require a great deal of copper.
